Biden set to launch presidential campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Vice President Joe Biden is expected to join the crowded 2020 Democratic presidential field next week.

The decision answers one of the most significant outstanding questions of the early presidential primary season, which has already seen announcements from 18 other Democrats. Biden, 76, would be the most experienced politician in the race and the second oldest, after former 77-year-old Bernie Sanders. His plans were confirmed by three people with knowledge of the decision. They were not authorized to discuss the plans publicly and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity. The announcement is expected as early as Wednesday and would follow months of deliberation over his political future.

Already, supportive donors have begun trying to raise money on his behalf.

High-speed chase roars through Amsterdam

A motorcycle rider led authorities on a wild chase Wednesday morning, reportedly reaching up to 140 mph while evading several pursuits, before failing to comply with a trooper’s attempt to stop them in Schenectady County.

New York State Police attempted to stop the unidentified motorcyclist on Route 5 in the Town of Glenville, but the rider reportedly opened a high-speed chase with the trooper, according to city Detective Joseph Spencer.
